As a traveler who logs over 100,000 miles per year in the air, I often find myself needing to keep in contact with colleagues/clients during my travel hours. However, I do not condone the use of cellular phones during the flight. I would much rather see the FCC and FAA work towards providing internet access as this is less intrusive on passengers close by.

In short, I hope that you consider my opinion, and not allow cellular phones to be used during flights.
